

Voyel Incoming offers you the opportunity to stay in host families to better discover the french way of life and improve your french. It can be either for the total length of your stay or only for a few nights during a discovery tour.

Here is the way it works:

- Young people usually stay in pairs in the host families (1 bed/student) but it is possible – if requested by the Tour Leader – that they stay alone (only a few of them or the whole group).
- A Local Organizer recruits and supervises the host families. He/she is at the meeting point when the group arrives and leaves and sometimes in the morning or in the evening when the group returns from its excursion. You can also reach him/her any time at home or on a mobile.
- It is possible to spend full days with the host families on Saturdays and Sundays + during French public holidays, but not during the week because families work.
- Host families usually provide 3 meals per day: breakfast, lunch (or packed lunch) and dinner.
- Each student has to complete a “homestay form” several weeks ahead of the trip so that we and the host families can have the maximum information about him/her, especially his/her health problems and special dietary needs. Host families really appreciate to have a photo of the students that they are going to host.
- Teachers usually stay in families as well but we can also book them in a hotel if they prefer (this usually involves some supplements specially if they require single rooms).
